

Virtual tour real estate

Let buyers walk around a property without ever needing to leave their own home!

Clients and investors can't always get to a property that is for sale easily. Times may not match up, it may take a great amount of traveling, and the worst situation is when a potential buyer is disappointed by what they see. A virtual tour lets any buyer see exactly what a building looks like – virtually!

What is a virtual tour?

A 360° virtual tour is a simulation of a walk-through of a property.

It is the perfect marketing tool that can be used in real estate and design scenarios and is useful for projects that are not yet completed to give a true understanding of the flow of the building.

Clients and investors can see how the finished project will look and gain a real understanding of the space.

Many brands have created real estate virtual tours with real estate virtual tour software, and hotels, restaurant owners, real estate agents, and even recruiters have all benefitted from virtual tours.

How does a virtual tour work?

A virtual tour is created by using 3D models and images of buildings to allow you to have the experience of walking through a building - even before it is built.

Using 360 virtual tours for real estate marketing and other campaigns can show people from around the world what a building is like, making it an ideal solution to attract international property investors.

Every aspect of a virtual tour can be modified, including internal décor and paint, furniture, wall coverings, and more.

Viewers can fully appreciate the interior space that is on offer, making it far superior solution than simple photographs.

How can virtual tours benefit your business?

Real estate agents reap the benefits of virtual tours as they can give a real impression of a home before a potential buyer steps through the door.

It can help a buyer decide if they are really interested, saving the time and hassle involved in providing an in-person tour to a buyer who won't want to buy the home in the end.

For construction companies, 360 virtual tours provide customers with the option of reviewing an assortment of home plans to visually demonstrate the differences between the layouts.
